Two levee projects kick off in West Sacramento

Two north-city levee improvement projects are getting underway.

The City of West Sacramento and the West Sacramento Flood Control Agency (WSAFA) have approved the projects involving more than 8,000 feet of levees along the Sacramento Bypass and the Sacramento River North Levee, according to city officials.

A $15.1 million project called "The Rivers Early Implementation Project" has gone to Raito, Inc., for construction near the Rivers subdivision and the Sacramento River.

Meanwhile, a $5.1 million levee improvement project near the CHP Academy has been awarded to Teichert Construction.

The projects use funding from fees approved by local property owners, along with state funding.

"Our residents' commitment to flood protection has allowed the city council to deliver a steady stream of key levee improvement projects as part of the city council's unwavering focus," said Mayor Christopher Cabaldon in a press release. "Flood tragedies around the country this year strike a chord in our own backyard, emphasizing the need to continue our aggressive flood control improvements."

The work will bring levees to stricter standards. Under new federal guidelines, said the city, the Sacramento region "has the highest risk of river flooding compared to other urban areas in the nation."

The two newly funded projects are among the "early implementation projects" chosen to be part of this large-scale levee improvement program.

Construction is expected to begin this month and continue through December.

The public is invited to a groundbreaking ceremony at 9:30 a.m. on July 19, near Riverbank and Todhunter (just north of Bryte Park).

Activist sues Whitey's over disability access

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

The bathroom at Whitey's Jolly Kone is closed to the public. But the fact that it's closed is not as remarkable as the reason it's closed: A Southport man who has sued dozens of Northern California businesses over compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act has now targeted this drive-in burger stand on Jefferson Boulevard.

"He served us with papers in April," said Paula Ericson, who owns Whitey's with her husband, Steve. "He claimed in his papers that he tried to use our bathroom and couldn't, and therefore he had to wet his pants. He never bothered to bring his concern to our attention, he just sued us."

Whitey's is a decades-old drive-up spot on the Jefferson Boulevard corridor, known for a menu including burgers, tacos and shakes. It's got a modicum of fame, even, in the Sacramento region. In 2009, the place earned a Zagat review recommendation based on its value. It's the only Zagat-recommended eatery in the city, and it's popular with a wide cross-section of residents from Little Leaguers to politicians.

The resident who sued them, George Louie, couldn't immediately be reached by the News-Ledger for comment — but the newspaper will provide his side of the story if it becomes possible. A quick Internet search of legal and newspaper web sites shows that Louie is reportedly a diabetic in his 60s who has lost a leg to that disease. Louie's lawsuit against Whitey's says he relies on a wheelchair.

Louie has sued dozens of businesses -- including wineries in Napa, a Wells Fargo Bank, a motel in Marysville, and businesses in the Bay Area and northern Central Valley.

The lawsuits typically challenge a business's access to the handicapped, and he asks for financial damages as permitted under the Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA).

"He's sued the City of West Sacramento, Costco, PG&E," said Ericson. "The city settled with him. A lot of people think it's easier to settle." The lawsuit against Whitey's — filed in federal court in Sacramento — includes a separate complaint against a Marysville restaurant about ADA access.

She said her husband received a call at Whitey's from Louie, after they were served with the lawsuit.

"He said to Steve, 'Hey bossman, this is George Louie, I'm suing you, how can we take care of this?'" said Paula Ericson. "He wanted money -- he just wanted Steve to say how much. I was so angry I just told Steve we're going to take care of this."

The Ericsons haven't made an offer. They have hired an attorney to fight the lawsuit.

They also believe Louie's claim against them doesn't have merit: their restaurant is not required to provide a public restroom at all, said Paula Ericson.

"The city (of West Sacramento) assured us we do not have to have a public restroom. We have no indoor seating and there's no requirement for a public restroom here due to the small size of our building. Once we were sued, we immediately put up a sign saying there is no public restroom. If customers say 'What do you mean? I've used it before,' we say 'I'm really sorry, we're having difficulty with the ADA.'"

What's the problem with this particular restroom?

"Our building sits on a one-foot foundation, so you have to step up, and the bathroom is too narrow," she said. Upgrading the old building would not be cost-effective. So the bathroom remains closed to the public.

There remains to be a hearing on the Whitey's case.

But some published reports say the Ericsons' defense may get some help, indirectly, from Louie himself. According to the Marysville Appeal-Democrat, Louie is in bankruptcy proceedings, and a U.S. District Court judge has written that this affects his "standing" as a litigator and interrupts his ability a case like this.

Spilled beer

The unfortunate truck driver above appears to be on his cell phone -- perhaps explaining the situation to his boss -- after accidentally dumping most of his load of 36-packs of canned Coors beer onto the roadway on Lake Washington Boulevard in Southport. Some of the cans broke free and rolled all the way across the four-lane road in the accident on July 5. A police report blamed the driver for "failing to secure his load."

Love is like being hit by a tennis ball

Note: Daryl is in on vacation this week. Below is one of his favorite columns from the past.

The other evening, after yet another long day of slaving away at the News-Ledger, I shuffled through my front door, slowly made my way over to my favorite easy chair (which is situated so that it has the best television viewing in the house), grabbed the TV remote control from its sacred resting place, clicked on one of those headline cable news programs, collapsed in the comfort of my chair, and waited anxiously to see if the world had blown up yet. But even before my eyes had fully adjusted to being indoors, my wife tapped me on the shoulder and said, "I think you need to have a little talk with one of your sons."

"Which one?" I reluctantly asked.

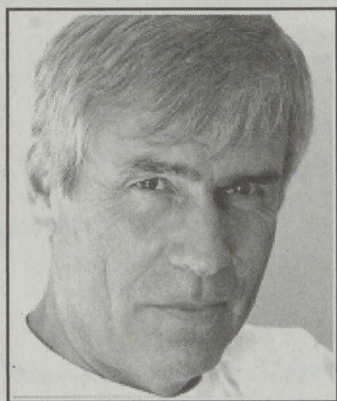

"Your youngest son."

"But I'm watching the news," I whined. "Do I have to do it right now?"

"Yes, you do."

When my wife refers to any of our three sons as "your son", it is usually her way of telling me that one or more of them have done something she doesn't particularly approve of and that it's more or less my fault for having created a lax environment conducive to the offense having happened.

"So, what did he do this time?" I asked with interest, guessing that he had probably brought home another poor progress report in math. "And if he's just having trouble in Algebra again, I think you have to keep in mind that I was one of the worst math students in the history of James Marshall High School and it probably doesn't really make a whole lot of sense for me to be lecturing him all the time about the need to get A's and B's in a subject where I have always been brain dead. Plus you're the one who always got great grades in math so maybe you should be the one to give him the lecture this time."

"It's not about Algebra, Daryl," my wife assured me, obviously opening up a whole other can of worms. "So, then what's the problem?" I asked cautiously.

"Have you seen his neck lately?"

"His neck?" I asked, not having a clue what my wife was talking about.

"That's right, his neck."

"What's wrong with his neck? Did he hurt it or something?"

"I tell you what," said my wife, who has always been a believer in that old saying that a picture is worth a thousand words, "why don't I just go drag him away from his video games and have him pay you a little visit? Then you'll know exactly what is wrong with his neck."

"Fine," I said, turning my attention back to the television set and still hoping to see at least a little bit of the day's news.

A few minutes later, with my youngest son and wife standing in front of me and blocking out any hope I had of seeing the TV screen, I reluctantly said, "So, young man, your mother tells me you hurt your neck or something. How did you do that?"

"It's no big deal," my son assured me, his voice a little more contrite than usual.

"Go on," said my wife to my son, "show your father your neck."

"Do I really have to do this, Dad?"

"Just do as your mother says," I said, giving him an 'it'll be easier on everyone this way' look.

So, very reluctantly, my youngest son pulled down his shirt collar a few inches and there for all to see was a bright red hickey. "Your son has a love bite on his neck," said my wife with emphasis.

"It would definitely appear so," I agreed, making a mental note that this was probably not the appropriate time to be giving my youngest son a high-five.

"Love bite?" said my son. "Just how old are you people, anyway? I've never even heard of that before!"

"And do you want to know how your son said he got that thing?" my wife asked me with interest.

"I don't think so," I admitted.

"He told me that he got smashed in the neck with a hard-hit tennis ball during tennis practice at the high school this afternoon."

"Is that what you told your mother?" I asked my son, trying to keep a straight face.

"That's my story, and I'm sticking to it," said my son with words to that effect.

"Well," said my wife, pointing at the obvious hickey on my son's neck, "if he got hit on the spot I'm looking at with a tennis ball, then that tennis ball must have stopped there for a good couple of minutes and sucked real hard on his neck!"

"Can I please go now?" pleaded my son.

"Not until you tell me how you're doing in math," I said, figuring I might as well kill two birds with one stone.

Youths in the West Sacramento Little Leagues and softball leagues have been hard at work in the regional All Star tournaments in recent days.

On July 1, West Sacramento Girls Softball sent three teams to tournament play, although their "juniors" won by forfeit and were scheduled to advance to division play. The age 11-12 game was postponed, but the age 9-10 girls took on Rio Linda. The squad came from behind to tie the game and send it to extra innings, but the game ended when called for darkness.

When they met up to settle the score, Rio Linda prevailed 7-4.

The West Sac 9-10 squad then lost to Rio Linda on July 5 to be eliminated. The 11-12 year olds dropped a game to North Natomas. They later earned a chance to play Thursday for the championship, but results were unavailable.

In boys' play, Rio Linda defeated Washington Little League's age 11-12 team on July 5.

West Sacramento's 11-12-year olds dominated Sierra, forcing the game to be called after four innings after West Sac amassed a ten-run lead. West Sac was scheduled to play again on Saturday.

The News-Ledger will try to bring you up to date with further tournament information next week.

The information includes citizen complaints and other statements that have not substantiated or verified by an investigation or a courtroom.

block of West Capitol detained a 37-year old Sacramento woman who tried to shoplift $200 worth of meat products. Police arrested her and released her with a citation to appear in court.

July 6, 4:50 p.m.

Letters to the Editor

Who's in a gang?
Re "Gang Injunction: who decides who's in a gang?," News-Ledger July 6:
According to Asst. Chief Deputy District Attorney Jonathan Raven, the person who makes the determination that a person is a gang member is an "expert." It brought back some memories of my time spent at the trial of the four young Mexican boys D.A. Reisig accused of being domestic terrorists, then the charge changed to attempted murder, and he finally got them convicted of something that got them around ten years in adult prison, all for getting into a rock throwing contest and fight, with the first blows being thrown by the engineer with the crew of a local Amtrak train rolling down the track.
The boys had been drinking beer, and probably started out as a dare or prank to stand on the track and pester this same engineer they had seen many times before running down this same track. The expert called by the DA was a local police officer I believe, and he testified to the same usual criteria: admission to a gang, (by the way, these boys denied being in a gang) information from an informant, presence of gang related tattoos, etc, etc., basically the same ones mentioned by our deputy D.A. in his answer to the News-Ledger.

How many out of ten do you think this expert gets right? Five? Six? Eight? I don't believe it is an exact science by any means. But the criteria used is not the problem here. The problem is the lack of crime in this neighborhood and the lack of a valid argument for the injunction in the first place. This lack of neighbors crying out for help, the fact that FBI statistics show that crime is down, leads one to logically think that maybe there is some other reason for this injunction.
Could it be that it is an attempt to devalue this property for later purchase at a lower price? Or the thought occurred to me that any Mexican parent with teenage children might move if threatened with their kids being used as cannon fodder by corrupt politicians, thereby helping to clear the neighborhood. I cannot speculate on somebody else's motives, but I do know our politicians rely on real estate development money to get themselves re-elected. If you look into their campaign statements filed at the County Recorder's office you will see that most of them if not all rely on this money to fund their campaigns and who knows what else, including our D.A. Jeff Reisig, who seems to be behind this injunction.

People don't need an expert to know whether they feel safe or not in their neighborhoods, so where are all the letters to the editor from these terrified residents? I have not seen one yet, and I've been griping about this injunction in the paper for years.

GO FIGURE! by Linda Thistle

The idea of Go Figure is to arrive at the figures given at the bottom and right-hand columns of the diagram by following the arithmetic signs in the order they are given (that is, from left to right and top to bottom). Use only the numbers below the diagram to complete its blank squares and use each of the nine numbers only once.

MOVIES OF THE WEEK

"Limitless" (PG-13) -- What if there was a mysterious drug that could unlock the full potential of your mind? Everybody knows that the right answer is to just say "no," but that never occurred to anybody working on "Limitless," a non habit-forming, underwhelming experience of a movie.

Bradley Cooper stars as Eddie, a struggling writer who comes across a clear pill that optimizes his personality, turning every gleaned fact and forgotten lecture into pure intellect and drive. With his unlimited potential, Eddie can improve his life in every way and demonstrate incredible powers of deduction, yet he still manages to make bad decisions with predictable consequences.

The story is adapted from a novel, and suffers the usual symptoms of a poorly adapted script -- excessive narration, loose ends, underutilized characters and more narration. The voice-over work and smash cuts manage to keep things moving and make "Limitless" a certified thriller.

"Take Me Home Tonight"

Bradley Cooper in 'Limitless'

(R) -- Movies banking on nostalgia should also bring something new to the table, right? Otherwise, why not just watch a movie that was actually made in the beloved time period of your choosing? This is the existential crisis at the core of "Take Me Home Tonight," a movie dead-set on reminding audiences that the 1980s happened.

Topher Grace ("That '70s Show," "Spiderman 3") plays Matt, a 23-year-old MIT grad whose lack of direction has him working at a video store and living with his parents. Sounds like somebody is in need of a wild night of partying, chasing girls and self-discovery. There is some real charm and even a few good laughs, thanks to a supporting cast that includes the dopest hilarity of Chris Pratt from TV's "Parks and Recreation."

This might have been a funnier, more original and more noticeable movie if it shed the '80s fixation. As it is, "Take Me Home Tonight" doesn't compare to the enduring charm of its John Hughes inspiration, but that's a tall order.

"Amelie" (R) [Blu-ray] -- This 2001 French film follows the titular fanciful femme as she finds beauty in the modern world. Audrey Tautou, who you might recognize as the pretty face dominating the "Foreign Language" shelf at the video store, plays Amelie, an eccentric young woman who finds a stranger's mementos in her Paris apartment and decides to return them to their owner. The heart of story is about interpersonal connection and finding love, but it's all wrapped in pretty packaging and solid art direction, which makes a Blu-ray release seem worthwhile.

"Miss Peregrine's Home for Peculiar Children" by Ransom Riggs (Quirk Books, $17.99)

Reviewed by Ealish Waddell

Growing up, Jacob loved to listen to the stories his grandfather told of his own youth. A refugee from wartorn Poland, he spent the war years in a bright, pleasant orphanage on a remote island in Wales, surrounded by friends who could literally do wonders -- levitate, walk around invisible, lift boulders, talk to animals. He even has photographs of them, tiny portraits of solemn-eyed children doing weird things. And he always insisted they were real.

Then Jacob's grandfather dies suddenly and horribly, and in the aftermath, a traumatized Jacob begins to question what exactly is true. He is determined to make a pilgrimage to see the legendary orphanage and its remaining residents for himself. But in Wales he finds only a crumbling old pile atop a hill, an abandoned wreck destroyed by a bomb in the early days of the war. No one has lived there for a very long time.

And then he hears voices. Thus Jacob finally meets the peculiar children and discovers that the truth of his grandfather's tales is even stranger than he could ever have imagined. And it quickly becomes clear that his new friends are in grave danger from a doom that Jacob has unwittingly led right to their door. Now, he may be the only one who can save them.

The atmosphere of this novel is exquisitely weird, blending the musty oddness of an old-fashioned children's tale with a contemporary energy, all tinged with a persistent underlying creepiness that gives the reader a good kind of shivers.

And, brilliantly, the vintage photographs that Jacob describes are sprinkled throughout the pages, giving force to the narrative in a subtle, visceral way. Actually looking upon the faces of the peculiar children themselves gives the reader just enough of a twinge that it isn't difficult to believe that maybe, just maybe, they aren't simply a story.

Slow-Cooker Summer

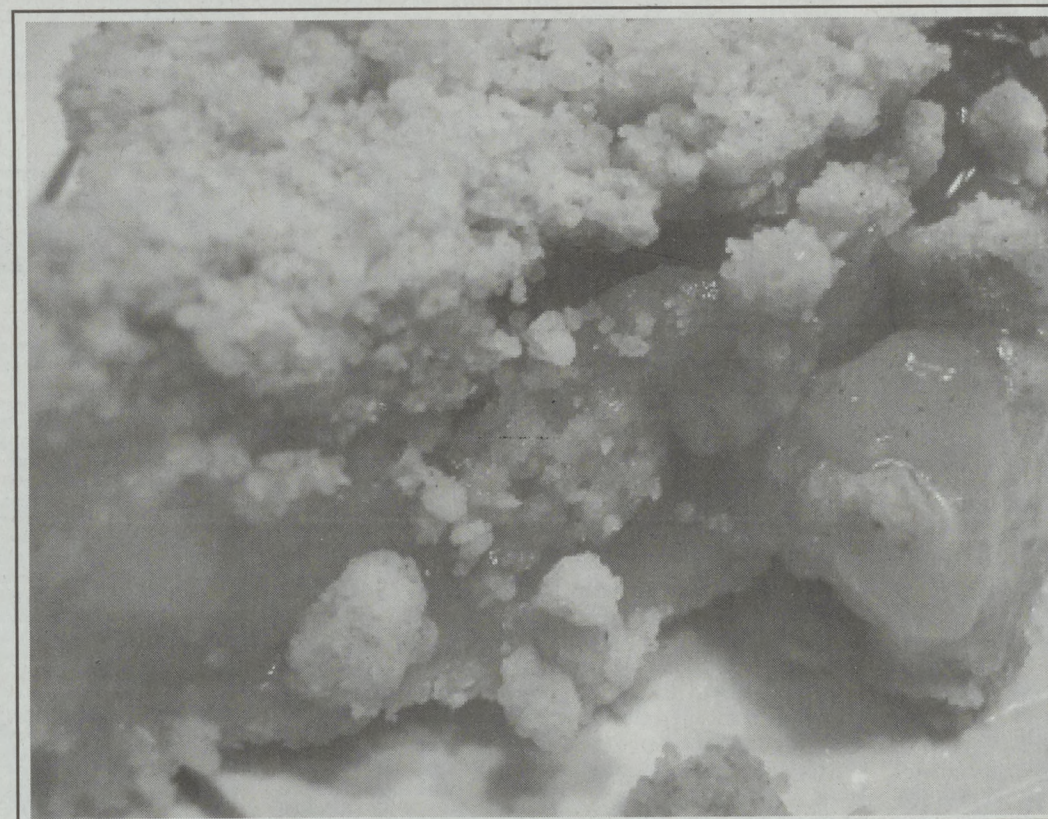

We're having record high temperatures in my home state of Texas. The heat seems to bring out my creativity, as I've devised a number of ways to continue to enjoy my favorite meals and desserts without using my oven. My slow cooker is often used in the wintertime for soups and savory dishes, but I've discovered that it's perfect for the summer months as well.

The slow cooker can be used, with a few adaptations, for many recipes that are traditionally prepared in the oven. Most slow cookers are sold with a recipe booklet. Expanding on the suggested slow cooker recipes to incorporate ones that usually require baking time in the oven is a great way to conserve energy and keep your home cool.

This easy Slow-Cooked Fruit Cobbler is the perfect way to avoid using your oven on a hot summer day. The recipe retains all of the fruity flavors of an old-fashioned baked cobbler without using as much heat. If you're grilling outside, dessert can be slowly cooking inside and cooling while dinner is served. It's the perfect finish to a summer meal.

SLOW-COOKED FRUIT COBBLER

You can use stemmed and sliced fresh or frozen berries in this recipe instead of the apples or peaches with great results! If you don't have buttermilk on hand, you can make a good substitute by adding a 1/2 teaspoon of lemon juice to 1/2 cup of milk. Stir and let it set for 10 minutes before using as directed in the recipe.

4 cups peeled, seeded and sliced apples or peaches (fresh, frozen or canned)
2 tablespoons butter, softened, or butter-flavored cooking oil spray
1 1/2 cups sugar, stevia sugar substitute or agave syrup
2 tablespoons flour
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Biscuit topping:
1 1/2 cups flour
1/4 cup sugar, plus more for sprinkling
4 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/4 teaspoon salt

1/3 cup cold butter, cubed
1/2 cup buttermilk

Grease bottom and sides of a slow cooker with a removable pot insert with the butter or cooking-oil spray. Add in fruit, sugar, flour, lemon juice and vanilla. Stir to combine.

Biscuit Topping:

1. Using a large bowl, mix together flour, sugar, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Cut in the butter with a fork or the tips of your fingers until crumbly. Add buttermilk and stir with a fork to make a slightly sticky dough. With floured hands, gather dough into a ball.
2. On lightly floured surface, gently knead dough about 10 times until smooth. Pat the dough into a circle large enough to cover the berries in the slow cooker. Cut the dough into 8 wedges and arrange the wedges over the fruit. Sprinkle wedges with sugar.

3. Place top on slow cooker, and cook on high until the biscuit topping is no longer doughy underneath, about 3 hours. Remove pot insert and let cobbler cool, uncovered, for about an hour before serving. Serve with a scoop of ice cream or whipped cream, if desired.
